

Welcome to Camp Weed! Marijuana-themed vacation spot opens in Colorado, offering high yoga, pot pairings with dinner and your own 'cannabis concierge'

- Marijuana-centric CannaCamp in Durango, Colorado, opens on July 1
- Visitors stay in idyllic wood cabins and have access to 170-acre grounds
- An array of cannabis-themed activities are on order - including yoga while high, cannabis cooking classes and help choosing the ideal blend

By KIERAN CORCORAN FOR DAILYMAIL.COM and ASSOCIATED PRESS

PUBLISHED: 10:46 EST, 9 June 2015 | UPDATED: 15:48 EST, 9 June 2015

A cannabis-themed vacation camp tailored to pot smokers is about to open in the Colorado countryside, offering events including high yoga and the services of a 'cannabis concierge'.

Visitors to CannaCamp, near the town of Durango, are promised an array of ways to indulge in the drug alongside traditional vacation activities such as hiking, fishing and fine dining.

It is the first destination of its kind to open in the state, which legalized marijuana in 2014. Doors will open on July 1.

© Scott D W Smith

Rolling hills, rolling joints: CannaCamp in Duragno, Colorado, is soon to open as Colorado's first weed-centric vacation resort

© Scott D W Smith

Potted salmon: Guests will be offered bespoke cannabis pairings with their meals and wine, such as this broiled salmon with asparagus and mushrooms

Due to the particulars of Colorado law, CannaCamp isn't allowed to include marijuana in its all-inclusive package of food, accommodation and activities, which start at $395 per person per night.

But resort staff will do their best to make sure every guest can get as high as they like, offering tailored guidance on the ideal drug blend, and even suggesting weed pairings with their fine dining options.

Promotional photographs from the resort show elegant glass bongos and lumps of cannabis laid out opposite wine glasses to accompany meals like broiled salmon with asparagus.

Marijuana nirvana: Guests can stay in log cabins on the 170-acre camp for $395 per night

Baked breakfast: Guests will have access to a 'cannabis concierge' while at the resort - which is not allowed by Colorado law to include the actual supply of the drug in its all-inclusive billing

Homely: Pictured is a bedroom inside one of the wooden cabins, of which there are nine in total

Guests will also be taught the art of cooking their own cannabis-infused food, as well as having access to more general instruction on using the drug.

Other parts of the camp experience combine more traditional activities with drug-taking, including Cannabis Yoga.

A write-up from the CannaCamp website reads: 'Consuming small doses before participating in one of our yoga classes melts away nerves and inhibitions, and makes you more receptive to the poses and music.'

© Scott D W Smith

Deep breaths: One of the classes on offer for guests will be Cannabis Yoga, where participants exercise while high

© Scott D. W. Smith

First: CannaCamp is the first marijuana-devoted resort in the state, which legalized the drug last year

'Enjoy a mellow high, and a greater focus on breathing in the crisp mountain air. Namaste.'

Smoking is permitted through most of the 170-acre grounds of the camp - though the areas inside the log cabin accommodation are off-limits.

Instead each of the nine cabins has a smoking porch from which guests can partake.

Joel Schneider, the CEO behind CannaCamp, said: 'We're bringing an element of luxury to that adventurous, exploratory vibe of childhood summer camp - in a beautiful setting where visitors can enjoy marijuana in a safe, comfortable, social environment.'

Read more:

CannaCamp | A Bud+Breakfast™ Mountain Resort